Economic growth for Upland and RC? You can bank on it!

a good sign of the times: Money changing hands

Money: changing hands, circulating, flowing through a business community like blood through the veins.

That's the difference between a city made strong by successful business and another suffering from financial anemia.

Residential construction, commercial development, in a word growth, provide the fiscal heartbeat pumping dollars through private and public sectors.

A community's fiscal pulse can be read by monitoring the dollars spent in local stores, borrowed from local institutions and circulating through local bank accounts.

Economists studying the financial climate of Upland and Rancho Cucamonga have used words like "tremendous" and "excellent" to describe the growth of the two cities.

While Upland was lauded for the affluency of its residents, Rancho Cucamonga earned applause for its rapid rate of growth. Observers say it will someday surpass Upland in terms of business enterprises and residential development.

Residents of both cities rank economically in the top 25 percent in San Bernardino County. And both cities are growing, bringing more residents with "above-average" incomes and attracting more businesses to serve them.

Just how much the cities are growing can be seen through the number of financial institutions operating in the areas, an indicator of affluency and economic growth.

In 1978 — a year after Rancho Cucamonga was incorporated — there was one savings and loan and two banks in the city: the Bank of America, opened in 1903, and the First Trust Bank, operating since 1958.

Total deposits at the banks were unavailable. But Sierra Savings and Loan, which later became Great Western Savings and Loan, reported $149,000 in deposits that year.

But as the city grew, so did its assets, prompting economists to compare Rancho Cucamonga with other light industrial boomtowns such as Irvine.

Seven bank branches as well as five savings and loans now operate in Rancho Cucamonga.

The city is also headquarters for two of the newer banks: Empire Bank National Association and Vineyard National Bank.

Bank deposits in June 1982 were recorded at $81.8 million, according to a report by California Research Corporation in Santa Monica.

The California League of Savings Institutions reported $25.36 million in deposits kept at Rancho Cucamonga savings and loan agencies as of September 1983. The number of accounts totaled 8,156.

Upland will be the headquarters of the recently-approved Upland National Bank, bringing the future number of bank branches in the city to 10. Savings and loan institutions within Upland total 8.

Upland is also home to the largest Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan branch, with deposits of $98.61 million.

Total bank deposits were reported in June 1982 at $194.1 million, while savings and loans recorded $209.21 million in deposits as of September 1983.

Growth in Upland has occurred at a slower rate proportionately than neighboring Rancho Cucamonga. Two bank branches have opened in Upland since 1978. Savings and loans that year reported deposits of $137.03 million, $72.18 million less than in 1983.

David Martz of California Research compared figures for both cities, noting that Upland had a longstanding high economic base, but Rancho Cucamonga was "coming into its own."

"I don't think you'll ever have the (residential) affluency of Upland, but in terms of business Cucamonga will be substantially larger. It could be the next Irvine," said Martz.

Roughly 20 years ago, the Orange County city of Irvine essentially didn't exist. But it is now renowned as a tremendous light industrial and research area.

"It just blows your mind to see what's going to be happening in Rancho," said Martz.

Upland, an avowed bedroom community, depends on its high income citizenry to lure small business and consumer-oriented banks to the city.

"The money is here," said Tony Malone, executive director of the Upland Chamber of Commerce. "When we talk about money, we're talking about doctors, lawyers and heads of corporations living in Upland."

Claire Hunnicutt, manager of the Pomona First Federal Savings on Foothill Boulevard, agreed that Upland is a money town.

"The fact we have one (financial institution) on each corner like a gas station means there is enough dollars in town," said Hunnicutt.

Lines (above) are a common scene at banking institutions throughout the valley. On the cover: With the growth of the population comes an influx of banks and more money changes hands.

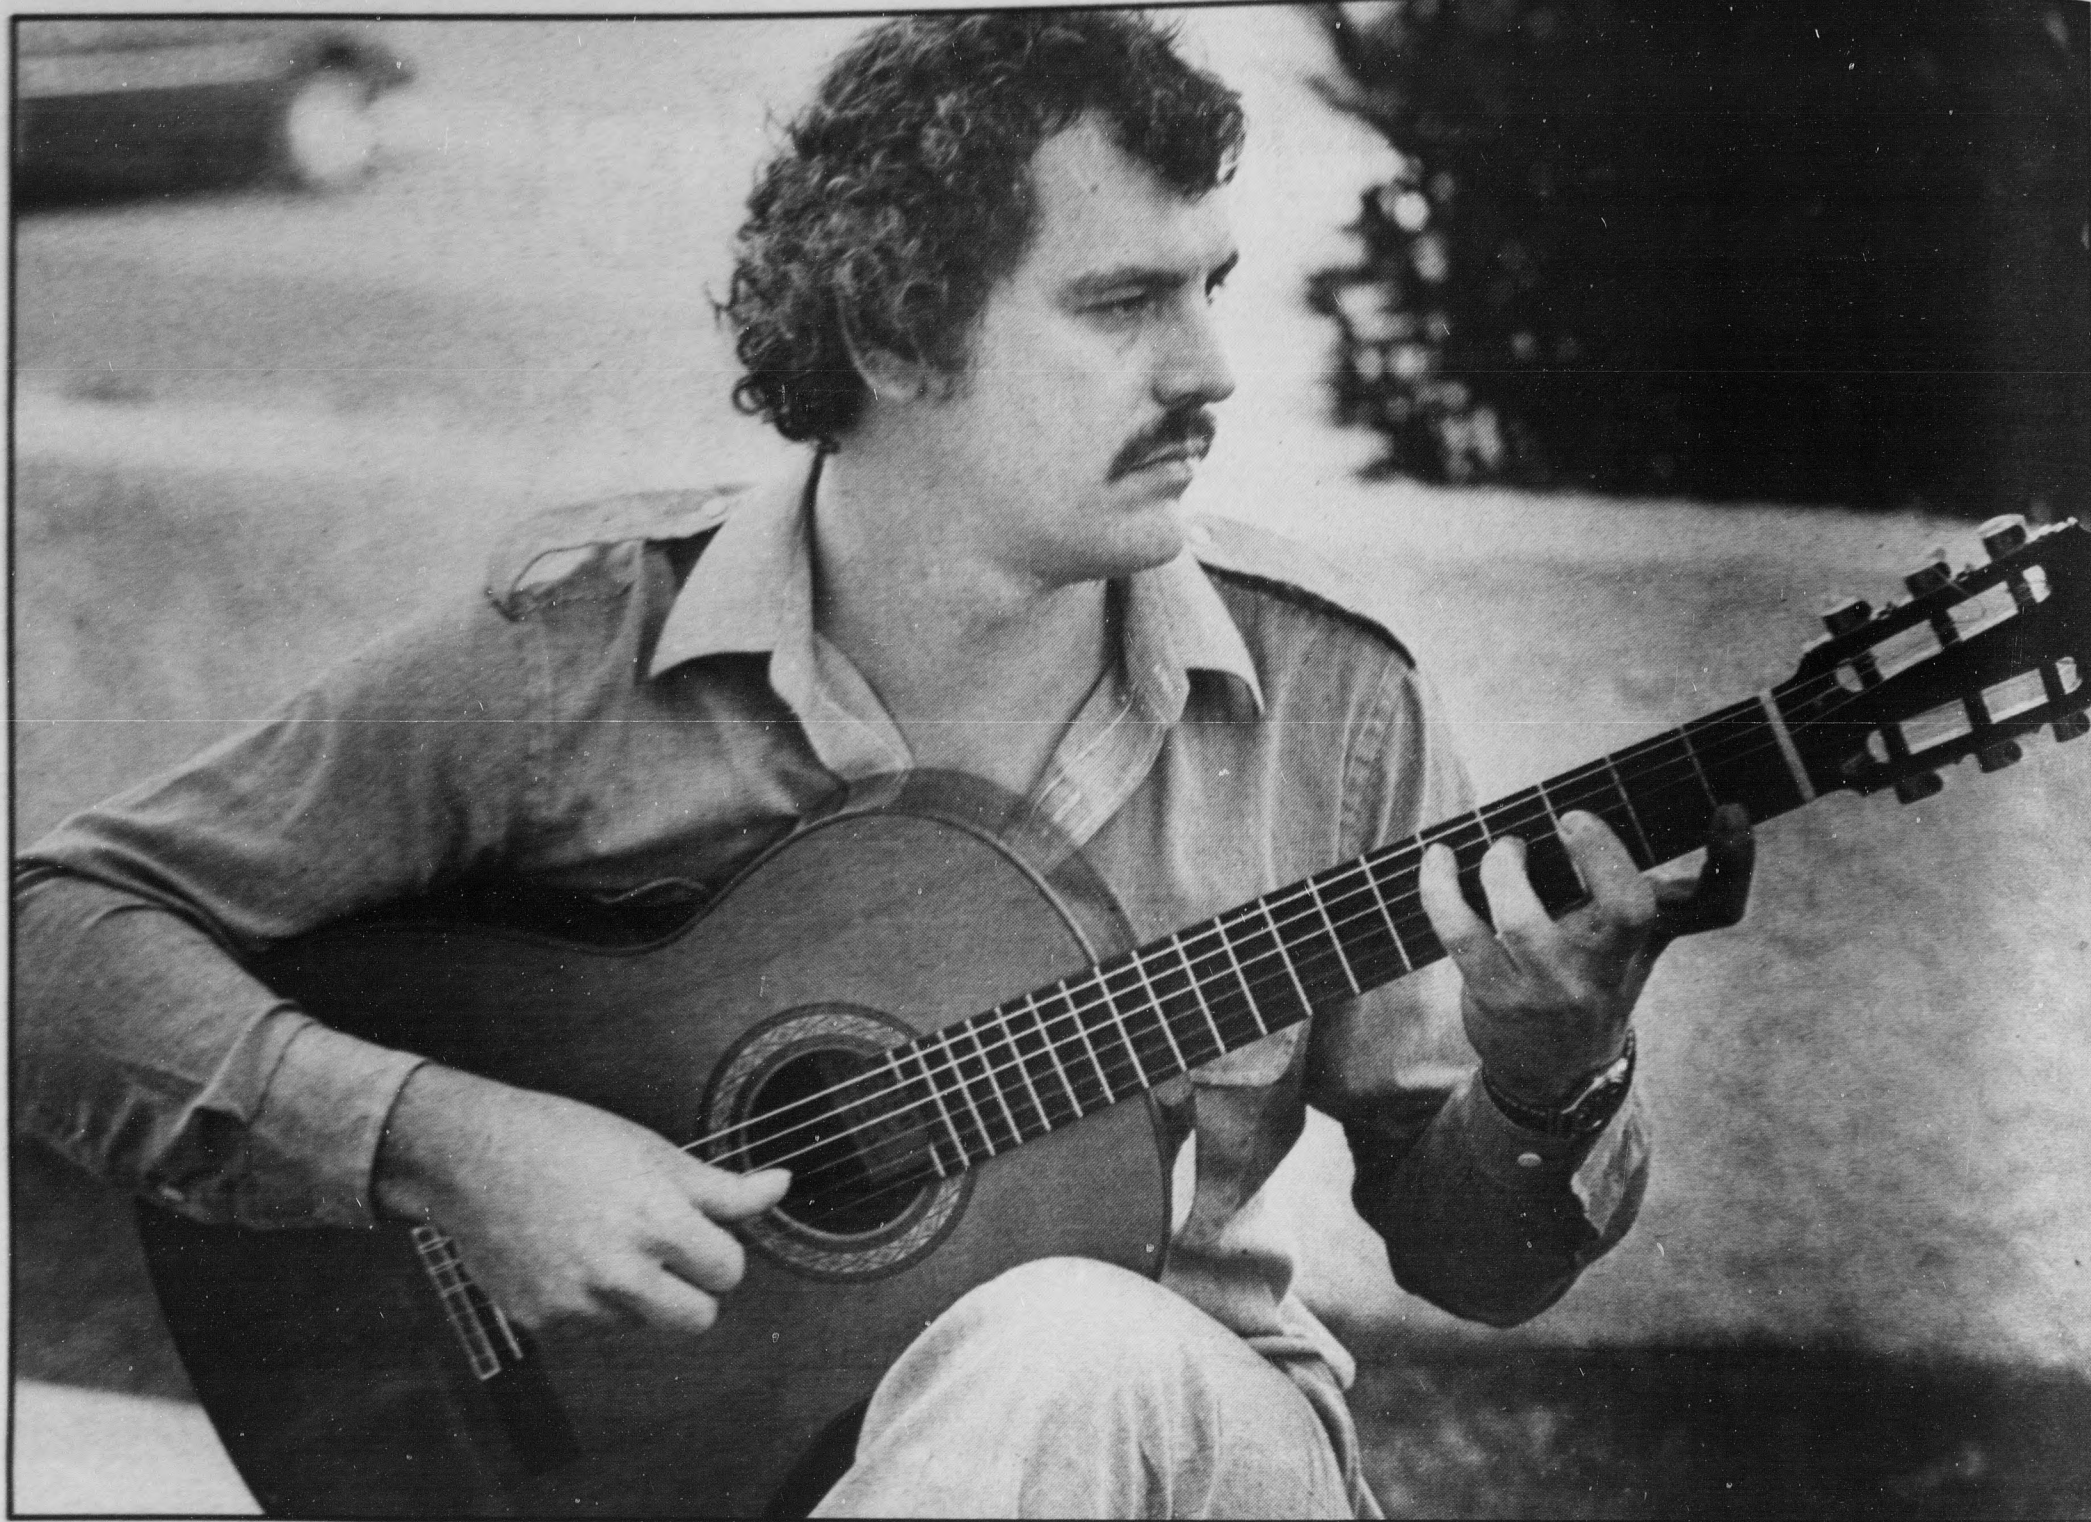

Computers are a must in banking as Teresa Hartwigsen (top) opens a new account at Upland Savings and Loan Association by punching the necessary information into the system. Denice Nevarez (left) works on a transition for one of her customers at Pomona First Federal Savings in Upland. Banks and savings (above) and loans try to lure potential customers with a variety of services.

Classical guitarist Jeffrey Burak will teach an Upland Recreation class in April and plans to write an elementary method book for beginning guitarists.

Guitar instruction in the schools?

By Terri Tirella

Classical guitarist Jeffrey Burak would like to add guitar instruction to the elementary school curriculum.

The Upland High School graduate wants to introduce the guitar as a serious string instrument, not just an instrument used to accompany the voice.

The kind of course he envisions would emphasize what he calls "the classical approach to playing," including instruction in appreciation of the instrument, discipline and correct technique." He said the guitar program could be "at most a stepping stone to a serious career, preparing students to meet college entry-level standards or, at least, a constructive musical experience applicable to classical, popular, jazz, folk and rock music."

Introducing guitar, along with other band instruments, could give students who don't want a band experience an alternative way to pursue an interest in music, suggests Burak.

Further, he claims that learning the fundamentals of music and correct technique, along with reading music and gaining the discipline necessary to a musician, would help all students and could be applied to any field.

Burak will teach Upland Recreation classes in April to try to combat the lack of musical education in schools. He also plans to write an elementary method book for beginning guitarists.

Burak, who lived in Upland for 15 years before moving to Ontario, will also perform a classical guitar concert on Saturday, March 24, at 8 p.m. in the social science auditorium at Mount San Antonio College.

"Performing solo classical guitar is more rewarding to play for me because it's more demanding and you need much more practice," he said. "In a rock band, if you make a mistake, no one notices; but in a solo, everyone does." Burak has played rock music before and writes songs. He and a friend performed original music at the Troubadour a few years ago.

"When playing classical music on the guitar it's more than playing chords. You're playing all the parts; the harmony, bass, melody, all at the same time, bringing out the important parts," he said.

Burak has a bachelor's of music and a master's in music from Cal State Fullerton. He studied under Vincenti Gomez in Los Angeles ("a world-known classical guitarist") and under David Grimes.

His interest in music began when he saw a neighbor's guitar at the age of 12. He started studying classical guitar seriously when he was 16.

"Classical guitar has grown in the last 20 years. It used to be a novel thing in the past, with guitar beginning as an accompaniment instrument to your voice," Burak said.

"Andre Segovia was one of the first popular musicians who brought classical guitar on stage. It took that to get it (guitar as a serious instrument) into the schools," he said.

According to Burak, now that there are advanced degree programs for classical guitar, it is becoming more difficult to get qualified students. "Because entry levels are very high, if students haven't played or don't know how to read music or learn the right techniques, they are not going to be able to perform at the level the school wants."

He said without qualified students, the popularity of classical guitar could die out. He said he hopes to promote classical guitar music because "music is our culture."

CHURCHES

Area churches celebrate Lenten season

By Terri Tirella

Many Upland and Rancho Cucamonga churches began the somber season of Lent this week with Ash Wednesday services.

But the services aren't universally observed in Christian churches.

According to the Rev. E.D. Thyr, pastor at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Rancho Cucamonga, liturgical churches such as the Catholic Church, the Lutherans and Episcopalians observe the 40 days of Lent, which do not include the Sunday services, to remind themselves of the suffering and death of Christ.

"Lent comes from an old English word, length, a season which occurred during spring when the days began to lengthen. The season concludes with Maundy Thursday, Good Friday and Easter. Maundy Thursday — maundy coming from a Latin word for 'command' — is the night before Christ's death, when he gave the command, which is the Latin word maundy comes from, to love one another," Thyr said.

For parishioners at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Upland the Lenten season is the beginning of a 90 observance; 40 days of lent until Easter and 50 days after Easter to celebrate baptism and a new life in Christ, according to the Rev. Peter Vavro.

"Lent is the period of living out our Baptism; it is a time to help our catechumen, a time of conversion, reconciliation, and a change of attitude motivating more prayer, fasting and abstinence," Father Vavro said.

The observance of Pentecost, 50 days after Easter, and the coming of the Holy Spirit is what the later celebration is about. "With the visit from the Holy Spirit the fearful disciples were strengthened. They were given the strength and courage to come forward and speak out. We remember it historically as the beginning of the church," Vavro said.

Vavro said, "The Lenten season begins at Ash Wednesday, a fasting day, with services marking parishioners with ashes from last year's palms reminding them that they haven't lived up to the loyalty to Christ."

He said many Catholics eat simple meals on Fridays in honor of Good Friday and the suffering of Christ. "Instead of steak, they will have a simple meal as an observance of Lent. The difference of the cost will be put in a box we have called 'Operation Rice Bowl.'"

Money saved in the Rice Bowl is put aside for the poor, according to Vavro. "We give sample menus and the box to keep on the table at home. The difference can add up to quite a few pennies," he said.

"Lent is the period of living out our Baptism; it is a time to help our catechumen, a time of conversion, reconciliation, and a change of attitude motivating more prayer, fasting and abstinence."

"Palm Sunday, the Sunday before Easter, is a reminder of the passion and loyalty of Christ. Thursday is a time to remember in Scripture and sacraments the last supper; Friday is the death of our Lord and the reading of the Passion. On Saturday there is the Easter vigil and baptism renewal, and that is the day of the catechumens' baptism, confirmation and first communion, and leads into Easter. Easter is a reliving and renewal of our baptismal responsibilities with special attention and celebration of our new members. It is a happy time, a very happy time, welcoming them into our family of faith," Vavro said.

The Lenten season is a busy time for Episcopalians according to the Rev. Robbin Clark, curate at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Upland. "We have a Lent program of house church education with suppers in (church member's) homes and a midweek Bible study after the 10 a.m. service Wednesday. We observe a quiet day on March 31. The youth at St. Mark's go on a retreat."

Services take on a more somber and penitential tone that fits the season, Clark said. "Lent is more of an interior thing with the traditional alms giving, fasting or praying. People tend to give up or take on something (additional Bible study) until Easter."

Historically, the night before Lent begins has been called Fat Tuesday, Clark said.

"People would have a pancake supper the night before Ash Wednesday to use up the fat they were not allowed to have during lent. Fat Tuesday is the last day of Mardi Gras, the last big party before Ash Wednesday," she said.

During the Middle Ages, people who were notorious sinners used the Lenten season as a time to prepare to rejoin the church, Clark said. "Some people did penance to be readmitted. They would use the time as a reminder on how they failed God and remember how Jesus faced the temptations and trial."

"It is a time of self-examination, penance and self-denial to get back in touch with God. Many people give special offerings for missionary outreach, and to help the poor and homeless."

"It is a time of being reminded of our real status before God. The more one opens up and prepares for the Easter celebration, the more joyous and more wonder of what Easter really is all about, it really hits you more deeply," Clark said.

At St. Marks, Easter service begins at 5 a.m. "It's dark when the service begins and we tell of God's great deeds for his people. When the sun comes up as a greeting to Easter, it is a symbol of the light of Christ. We sing the first alleluiahs since the beginning of the Lenten season, the church lights up, we decorate the church, change vestments and celebrate Easter. It raises you right up," Clark said.

The darkness into light holds a symbolic meaning of Christ's overcoming death with life with the resurrection.

ARE YOU A "COMPULSIVE CONSUMER?"

The days when humans needed only food and shelter are long passed for many in this society. The modern marketplace is so crowded with goods clamoring for our attention that it is difficult to know when to stop. Even if our rooms and closets are full, there is always a new style or model to make us feel that we have a new "need." To add to the temptation, shopping malls and credit cards have made buying very, very easy.

How do we know when shopping has gone beyond a straightforward matter of stocking the larder, and has become fraught with psychological implications? Ask yourself these questions to begin your self examination—

—Do you feel that a day or excursion is not satisfactory if no purchase has been made?

—Do you make a major purchase as a way to cheer yourself up, only to find the glow fades quickly and the process starts again?

—Do you consistently overstep your budget or avoid formulating one at all?

If you answer yes to these questions, your buying may be masking an underlying dissatisfaction; some self exploration is called for.

Hispanics honor 10 leaders

Hispanic leaders need to serve as role models for minority and Anglo communities, a political action group maintained Monday.

To accomplish that goal Congreso para Pueblos Unidos (CPU) and several other organizations plan to honor 10 Hispanics from the West Valley next month in what the group hopes will become an annual event.

A "Latino Recognition Banquet" will be held April 9 at the Red Lion Inn in Ontario.

The Outstanding Latino Recognition banquet will honor Cecilia Preciado Burciaga, a provost at Stanford University; Bishop Gilberto Chavez, auxiliary bishop for the San Diego Diocese; Alberto Davila, World Boxing Association bantamweight World Boxing Champion; Cande Mendoza, publisher of La Voz newspaper; and Catalina Montez, social and community worker.

Others include Anthony Munoz, All-

Pro lineman for the Cincinnati Bengals; Sally Rivera, educator at Claremont Colleges; Rudy Valadez, educator; Pat Zavella, anthropologist at the University of California, Santa Cruz; and Tony, Martin, Joaquin, Max and Luis Zendejas, all of whom have carved a name for themselves as football place kickers.

Present at the program will be California Supreme Court Justice Cruz Reynoso, State Sen. Reuben Ayala, comedian and television personality Paul Rodriguez, mariachi San Martin, cellist Anna Maria Maldonado and Jim Blacarte, an attorney who will be master of ceremonies, Navarro said.

A no-host reception will begin at 7 p.m. Dinner will begin an hour later.

Tickets are $35 per person or $350 per table. Proceeds will go toward CPU projects. Reservations may be made by calling the CPU office at 888-0207 or Irma Welsch at 987-1737.

GLANCING BACK

By John H. Nicholson

Scratching for cash wasn't easy

At the considerable risk of boring some readers to tears, I am going to try a bit more chronicling of the Nicholson tribe's life here in Upland. At least one item may be of use to some young families who are trying to keep their bills paid.

Our fairly healthy wartime paychecks were behind us, and those in the post-war era, especially on starting a new job, were a bit puny. Quite often, we found ourselves scratching for cash to pay some of those bills that came along on a "once in a while" schedule. Things such as quarterly insurance premiums, taxes, auto registration, magazine subscriptions, shoes and the like.

One day, at the First National Bank (now Crocker Bank), Ethel was grumbling to the teller, Ada Cooper, about the problem. Ada said that what we needed was a budget checking account, in addition to our usual checking account. She explained how it should work and we did it.

We listed all of those items that caused anguish when they arose and estimated the annual cost of each. The total of all those figures was divided by the numbers of paydays in a year. That resulted in the amount of money needed each payday, to go into the new budget account.

We put in a small amount to start that checking account and faithfully added to it, the proper amount, every payday. Anything remaining from each paycheck went into our old checking account, for groceries, utilities, movies, etc. But when one of those formerly hard-to-pay items came along, we paid from the budget account, with no pain. It worked nicely. We reviewed our list annually and made corrections as needed. After a number of years, things got better and we dropped the budget account. It had solved a big problem.

The house we left in Long Beach was of concrete blocks, in every wall, inside and out. To even hang a picture required an hour with a star drill and a hammer to make a hole for a wood plug and a nail. Our Upland home was of wood. We remodeled, added on, hung pictures and modernized, with little problem. A 20-by-40-foot garage and workshop was built. All of this with my labor, in odd hours. Finally we sold the orange-growing part of the place, which then grew seven apartment buildings.

In the early 1950s, Upland was experiencing growing pains and a new master plan for the city was in preparation. A bunch of us younger fellows got together and formed the Young Taxpayer's Association. Somehow, I wound up as chairman and spokesman. We followed the master plan progress, discussing it among ourselves and with many other property owners. We also looked into other city problems, and older folks asked to join us.

So, we renamed to Upland Taxpayer's Association.

With a sizable membership, the city council began to listen to us. They made several master plan changes that we urged. In the southwest quadrant of the city, a number of owners wanted to be permitted lots of not over 7,500 square feet. We canvassed the area as best we could, and I reported to the city council that 89 percent of the property owners wanted to be able to subdivide to that lot size. So, the plan was changed accordingly. It was much later that I rechecked the figures and found that it was actually a long ways from 89 percent. I've never told anyone before.

In 1956, I hopped out of the frying pan and into the fire. I ran for city council. I just happened to get elected. We had many ongoing, growing pain problems. One that comes to mind was the rezoning of the southwest corner of Foothill and Euclid, where Von's, Sav-on, Security Pacific and others are now. The orange trees had been pulled. One friend, Manley Cole, of Upland, was not in favor of commercial use there. I said, "But the orange trees have been pulled. What else would you like to see there?" His thoughtful reply was, "Peach trees."

More about this next week. □

John H. Nicholson is an Upland resident who here chronicles his family's history in the West Valley.

City recognizes Crimestoppers program

Recognizing the third anniversary of the city's crime-busting anonymous informant program, Ontario Mayor Robert Ellingwood has officially proclaimed this week "Crime Stoppers Week."

Highlighting the week will be Crime Stoppers' second annual fund-raising benefit, to be held tonight at 5:30 at the Red Lion Inn, 222 N. Vineyard Ave., Ontario. It will feature door prizes and complimentary wine and cheese. Featured grand prize will be two AirCal round-trip tickets to any destination that airline serves.

Crime Stoppers had its beginning in Ontario on Nov. 4, when Councilwoman Faye Myers Dastrup, who had learned of the program at a conference, urged the city to start one of its own. The resulting program — which wages war on local crime by paying cash rewards to anonymous informants with information leading to arrest and conviction of criminals — began operation May 5, 1981.

In his proclamation, Ellingwood noted that Crime Stoppers has received 307 calls since 1981, which led to the clearing of 46 felony cases, the solution of three homicides, 17 armed robberies and 30 narcotics felonies and has recovered in excess of $115,000 of stolen property and $61,000 in narcotics.

"Crime Stoppers has paid out only $6,000 in rewards, and more than a dozen persons offered information which led to the solution of crimes and did not accept a reward," the proclamation said.

"The city council of the city of Ontario hereby applauds Crime Stoppers as an effective weapon in the war against crime, and commends the citizens involved in this program for their dedication and outstanding achievements," it said, urging "all citizens of the community to increase their awareness and pledge their continued support of the Ontario Crime Stoppers program."

Cost-cutting leads to better driver education at Chaffey

It began three years ago as a last-ditch attempt to save Claremont High School's driver training program.

But in the quest for a low-budget program, school officials devised a system believed superior to the traditional driver training program in use around California.

As a result, Claremont officials and the state Department of Education have fielded close to 200 requests from other school districts that want details about the Claremont High School program.

"As unique as it may seem, this is a case of cost-cutting resulting in a better program," noted Ron Meyer, an assistant principal who initially conceived the new program.

The program was the first, or one of the first, in the state to be "competency-based." Instead of logging 18 hours with a driving instructor — the chief state requirement for a certificate — students now must pass seven specific driving tests.

And the system broke new ground in giving parents a big role in driver training. Since each student was to spend 12 hours instead of 18 in the car with an instructor, Claremont High officials devised a "prescription" system to encourage at-home practice. The prescriptions, which are given every day to each student, suggest what skills they should practice with parents after school.

"This ties it down: Where is he bad, how can he improve?" explained

Claremont reading conference

"Reading and Writing in the Age of the Computer" is the focus of the 51st annual Claremont Reading Conference, to be held at The Claremont Colleges March 16 and 17.

The conference is sponsored by the school's department of education, and will include educators, reading specialists, librarians, psychologists and computer specialists.

The program will be highlighted by presentation of the 19th annual Recognition of Merit, awarded to an author in the field of children's literature each year.

Registration deadline is Tuesday, although spaces may be filled by then. For information, contact the Claremont Graduate School, 621-8000, extension 3750.

Focus on older college students

"What's 40, Female and Fantastic?" is the title of a talk to be presented Saturday by Dr. Juanita Montavani, dean of undergraduate studies at Cal State, Los Angeles.

Montavani will address a conference sponsored by the Commission on the Status of Woman at Cal State, San Bernardino.

The event is entitled, "Women's Challenge of the '80s: A Women's Conference," and Montavani will discuss the re-entering older college student in her talk.

Brochures and registration materials are available at local libraries and YWCAs, or by contacting the commission office, 383-2430.

R.C. Cub Scouts look back upon a full year of activities

By Terri Tirella

When Cub Scout Pack 641 of Rancho Cucamonga gathered recently for its annual Blue and Gold dinner, there was more to celebrate than the Boy Scouts' 74th Anniversary.

The pack has received several awards during the year, placing third in marching units participating in the Founders Day Parade and winning the highest district honors at Scout-a-Rama, according to Maggie Plunkett. Plunkett is den leader coach; her husband, Joe, is cubmaster.

"We had an Olympic shooting range at Scout-a-Rama, with rubber band guns, scenery and targets, with our cub scouts manning the booth," she said. The pack contributed a fourth of all the money given to the scout district, which has 20 packs, for Scout-a-Rama ticket sales.

"We're a very active pack; we do a lot of camping and have received awards. We had eight members participate in Webelo-Rama and held our own scouting olympics this year," she said.

The scouts held a rollerskating party and a Fun with Son event, but having fun wasn't all they did this year. "We repainted the play equipment at Lions Community Center Park and went to Alta Loma Convalescent Home at Christmas time, as well as planting trees," Plunkett said. The trees are an ongoing project.

Cub Scout Pack 641 will renew its charter this year for the 44th time. "We've rechartered 523 months and we were the largest pack until recently," she said.

The pack also sponsors Tiger Cubs, a program for boys in second grade or who are 7 years old. "We'll be displaying recent activities and awards received by Pack 641 at the Rancho Cucamonga Library," said Plunkett. Each den will display its crafts and achievements during the month of March.

More than 250 people attended the Blue and Gold awards ceremony, honoring the cub scouts and their families with awards of rank and recognition.

The Arrow of Light, the highest rank in the Cub Scout program, was presented to 10 local boys who are Webelos. Receiving the award were: Joey Flagg, Mark Gossage, Jerome Fritz, Jerry Kauger, Nathan List, Brian Mackie, Willie Plunkett, Brian Schriber, Jason Solano and Jeff Venable. Of the 10 recipients, three are old enough to be graduated into Boy Scout troops.

Driver education improved

Meyer. "We become the teachers and the parents become the reinforcers."

The system has proved popular with parents, who are asked to sign each prescription and add comments to the instructors. "They like the daily feedback from teacher to parent and from parent to teacher," said Meyer.

In 1981, the Claremont school board decided the financially hobbled district could no longer afford to subsidize driver education. That meant officials had to run the program on the $60 per student supplied by the state or abandon driver education altogether.

"We didn't want to see the program die because we feel driver safety is very important," Meyer said.

The state Department of Education agreed to waive the 18-hour requirement for Claremont High School. And the department's Bob Terry helped the district delineate the tested skill areas, which include such items as freeway driving, lane changes and signal approaches.

Besides the reduction in school training hours, officials changed driver education from an after-school to a summer schedule, reducing the length and expense of car leases.

Meyer and Esper Keiser Jr., head of the driver training instructors, hammered out the program's details.

Both believe the streamlined system is superior.

"Everybody feels like it's better now than it was before, more condensed," said Keiser.

In a letter to the district, the Department of Education cited Claremont's program as a model for other districts and thanked Keiser and Meyer for "this contribution to improving the quality of California education."

About 300 students will take driver training this summer at a total cost of $23,000 — all of it paid by the state. Savings through the new system have been estimated from $15,000 to 50 percent.

Could the same system of condensed instruction combined with daily reinforcement at home be successful in other courses?

Yes and no, according to Meyer.

School officials are encouraging teachers to maintain closer communication with parents, Meyer pointed out. And the school board recently voiced interest in the possibility of a districtwide homework policy.

But driving instructors have only three students at a time, allowing them to provide far more individualized instruction, including the daily prescriptions, than would be possible in regular classes with 30 students, Meyer noted.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

Give it to IRS. Or, keep it.

It's your money. You can reduce your 1983 taxable gross income by up to $4,000, or at least by $2,000. You can, that is, when you open your IRA Account at one of our offices prior to April 15, 1984 (technically you have until the following day, Monday, April 16, 1984).

SINGLE OR MARRIED.

If you are married and your spouse doesn't work, you can save up to $2,250. Take $2,250 right off the top of your 1983 taxable income. If you both work, you each can save $2,000 — a total of $4,000 right off the top. If you are single and employed, you can save up to $2,000.

YOU ARE ENTITLED TO IT.

Southwest's IRA Account is available to every American wage earner. Even if you are covered by a pension plan where you work (including a government job), or a Keogh Plan, you are entitled to have your own Individual Retirement Account so you can save tax-deferred, high interest-earning money towards your retirement.

IT'S DEDUCTIBLE & TAX-DEFERRED.

The benefits of your IRA are immediate and real: You reduce your taxable income each year by the amount you put in your IRA, usually resulting in fewer income taxes to pay. And, the money you save in your IRA, and the high interest it earns, are tax-deferred until you withdraw funds anytime after age 59½. Whatever you withdraw is taxed as ordinary income, and at the lower rates you most likely will enjoy after retirement. Penalties are required, by law, for earlier withdrawals.

It's up to you: Either (1) Pay taxes on all of your 1983 income, or (2) Open your IRA and save tax-deductible dollars — earning high interest — for your retirement.

If you prefer No. 2, please see us. We can help.

*"YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU CAN FIND EQUAL FACILITIES AND SERVICES FOR LESS!"

It's the water that attracted the area's early inhabitants

By Terri Tirella

The old fountain at Euclid Avenue in Ontario was more than an affectation in the 1880s.

It was a gimmick to lure people to purchase farmland in the West Valley.

"To convince travelers on the railroad there was water in the area, the fountain at Euclid Avenue near the train depot would be turned on when trains went by," said historian Bernice Conley, speaking as part of the "Know Your Heritage" series sponsored by the Rancho Cucamonga Historic Preservation Commission.

Conley, who writes about West Valley history, was one of three speakers lecturing about the area in the third segment of the R.C. series. She reported on the Ontario-West Valley real estate boom of the 1880s.

Robert L. Hickcox, retired manager of the Etiwanda Water Co., gave a condensed version of the history of the water system and problems of the Rancho Cucamonga area.

"Without irrigation, Southern California would be a desert. I think this year we're going to realize it in this district because we've only had about one-tenth of the rain we usually get this year," Hickcox said.

He explained how farmers irrigated their land in the early days: "Farmers had large tanks they would have filled and used for irrigation," he said, adding that domestic water companies were formed when people began moving to the area.

With families needing water under pressure 24 hours a day, he said, water fights were almost inevitable. "There's an old saying, 'Whiskey was made to drink, water was to fight over,'" Hickcox said.

Conley explained how a special issue of the Ontario Report, at that time a local newspaper owned by the Clark brothers, was sent east 100 years ago. It depicted the West Valley as a place where — for a small sum of money — farmers could make their fortune in orchards.

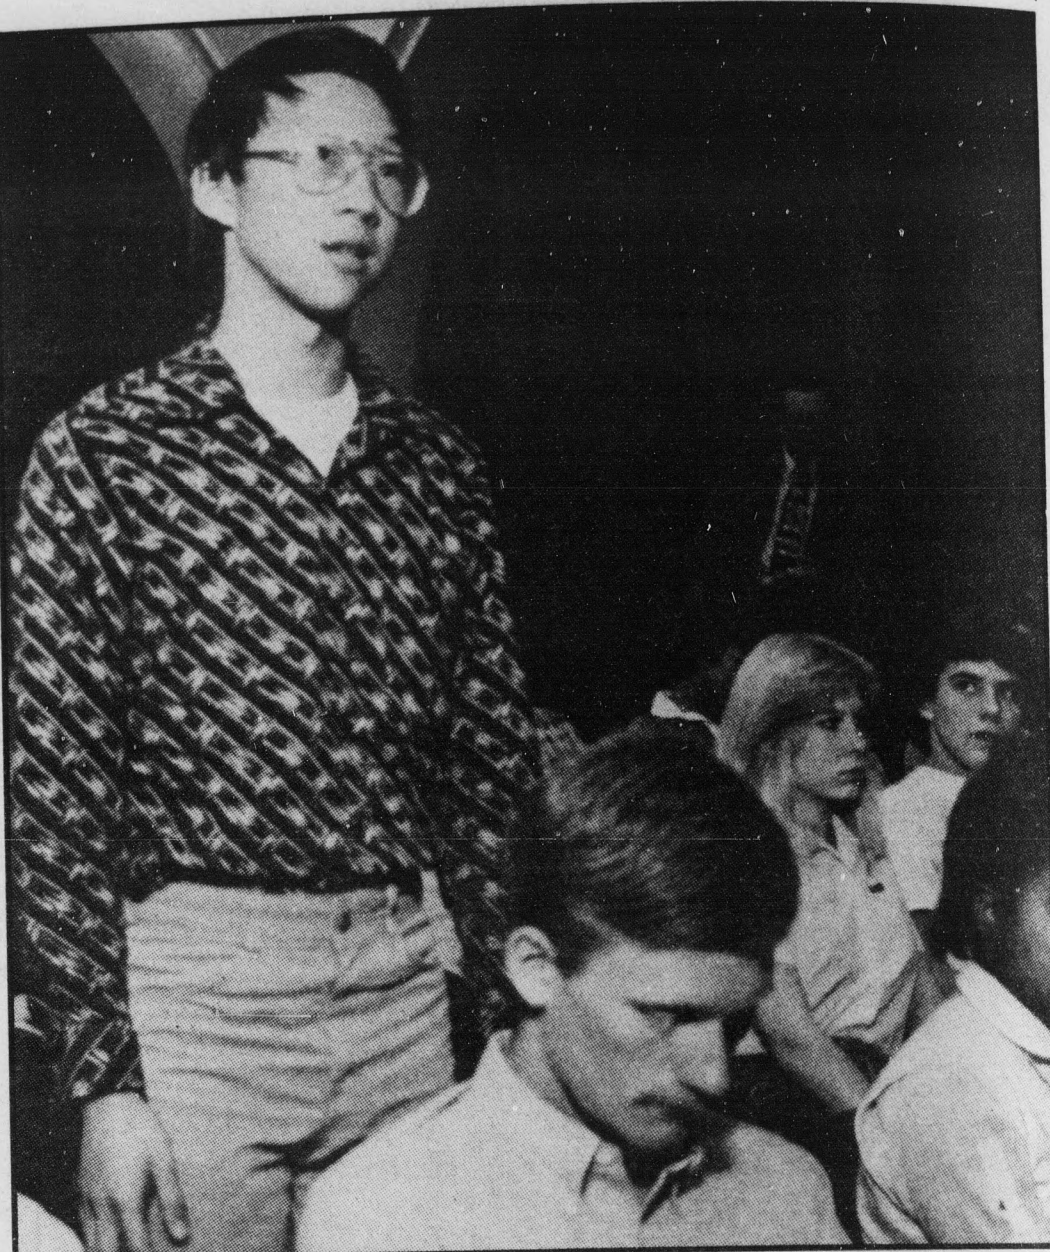

But the great land boom came to an abrupt end when a windstorm severely damaged buildings throughout the Rancho Cucamonga-Ontario area, even blowing the top story off one of the new hotels, said Conley.

Conley was followed by Dr. Daniel Milliken, past president of Chaffey College, who picked up the historical tale "right after the windstorms," when his grandfather came to the area.

Milliken's grandfather, Daniel Brewer Milliken, and partner G.D. Haven purchased a large tract of land in Rancho Cucamonga, bordered on the west by Haven, on the south by the Sante Fe Railroad, by Foothill Boulevard on the north and by Milliken Avenue on the east.

"They bought the property for $35 an acre from one of the California Universities. They got the land at that price because it had no water," Milliken said.

Why can't 2 agencies build 1 plant?

Engineers estimate that $34 million of water users' and taxpayers' money could be saved by building a large water treatment plant in the foothills between North Claremont and Upland.

Yet boards of two valley water agencies are moving forward with separate proposals to build two small water treatment plants about one mile apart. Both boards have project plans in early design stages.

Each has declined the other's invitation to join in the construction of a single large plant at its site.

One board represents the Three Valleys Municipal Water District, with headquarters in Pomona. The second is the Water Facilities Authority/Joint Powers Agency, with headquarters in Montclair.

The boards' sources of income are about one-quarter from taxes and three-quarters from water sales. They also earn interest on reserves.

Directors of the Three Valleys Municipal Water District on Feb. 7 approved a design capacity of 40 cubic feet per second — or 25.85 million gallons per day — for their planned project in North Claremont.

Directors of the Water Facilities Authority/Joint Powers Agency on Jan. 21 approved a design capacity of 53 cubic feet per second — or 34 million gallons per day — for the Upland plant.

Neither board appears willing to relinquish control of planning and construction of its proposed plant.

Nor do members of the two boards appear willing to relinquish administrative control of facilities after construction is complete.

The Three Valleys' Miramar plant is targeted at Padua and Miramar avenues in North Claremont. The Water Facilities Authority/Joint Powers Agency plant, being planned for a site at 18th Street and Benson Avenue in Upland, is referred to as the Benson plant.

The two sites are about one mile apart — one in Los Angeles County and the second in San Bernardino County.

Three Valleys' project is estimated by engineers to cost $45.1 million, including 20 years' financing costs, according to figures released by Doug Miller of Glendora, chairman of the Three Valleys board.

The WFA/JPA project is estimated by engineers to cost $69.7 million, including 20 years' financing costs, according to Miller's charts.

Upland Mayor John McCarthy, who serves as site project committee chairman of the Water Facilities Authority/Joint Powers Agency, said he does not know where Miller got his figures or how recent they are.

Combined costs of the two small plants total more than $114 million, according to information released by Miller.

Were the two boards to join in the construction of a 93 cubic-feet-per-second — or nearly 60 million gallons per day — plant at the Upland site, the cost estimate is $96.7 million, including 20 years' financing costs, according to Miller's information.

And were they to join in the construction of the 93 cubic-feet-per-second plant at the Claremont site, the cost estimate is $80.8 million, including 20 years' financing costs.

A large plant at either site would result in substantial savings, but the greatest savings would be accrued with construction of a large plant at the Claremont site, according to Miller's estimates.

"Significant overall savings would be realized from building one large plant to meet the needs of both groups," said Miller.

"There would be significant savings to the WFA/JPA — from $6.7 million to $16.7 million — if such a (large) plant were to be built at the Upland site. However, the savings to the WFA/JPA would be even greater, from $8.9 million to $22.1 million, if it were to participate in the Miramar plant.

"On the other hand, Three Valleys would not realize a savings from a single large plant at the Upland site but would realize significant savings, $4.8 million to $11.9 million, from a single large plant at Miramar," he added.

As an alternative to separate plants, Miller said an integrated plant at Miramar "is the most cost-beneficial alternative for the WFA/JPA and the only cost-beneficial alternative for Three Valleys."

Miller said that in light of the estimates, "we at Three Valleys propose to continue to develop the Miramar plant for our contracting agencies as the most cost-effective way in which we can meet the future treated water needs of our customers."

He said the Three Valleys board remains willing to discuss construction of one consolidated plant at the Miramar site with the WFA/JPA board.

Three Valleys serves customers in Pomona, La Verne, Claremont, Glendora, San Dimas, Walnut and Rowland.

WFA/JPA's customers are in Upland, Ontario, Chino, Monte Vista Water District for Montclair and San Bernardino County for Chino Hills.

Both agencies buy import California Aqueduct (Colorado River) and State Water Project (Northern California) water from the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California.

They blend the water — using some ground water — and treat it to meet state water quality standards. They then wholesale that treated water to their agency customers.

"This isn't something that sneaked up on anyone," said Colin Moore, former Three Valleys Municipal Water District board member, of current plans for two plants.

"Years ago, I said there should be only one plant," Moore said in a recent interview.

"Four years ago some of us began pushing for one plant, asking for coordination and cooperation. Now, the boards are going ahead with plans to build separate plants."

The former board member said costs will be much greater for two plants. He blamed politics for the failure of the two boards to get together.

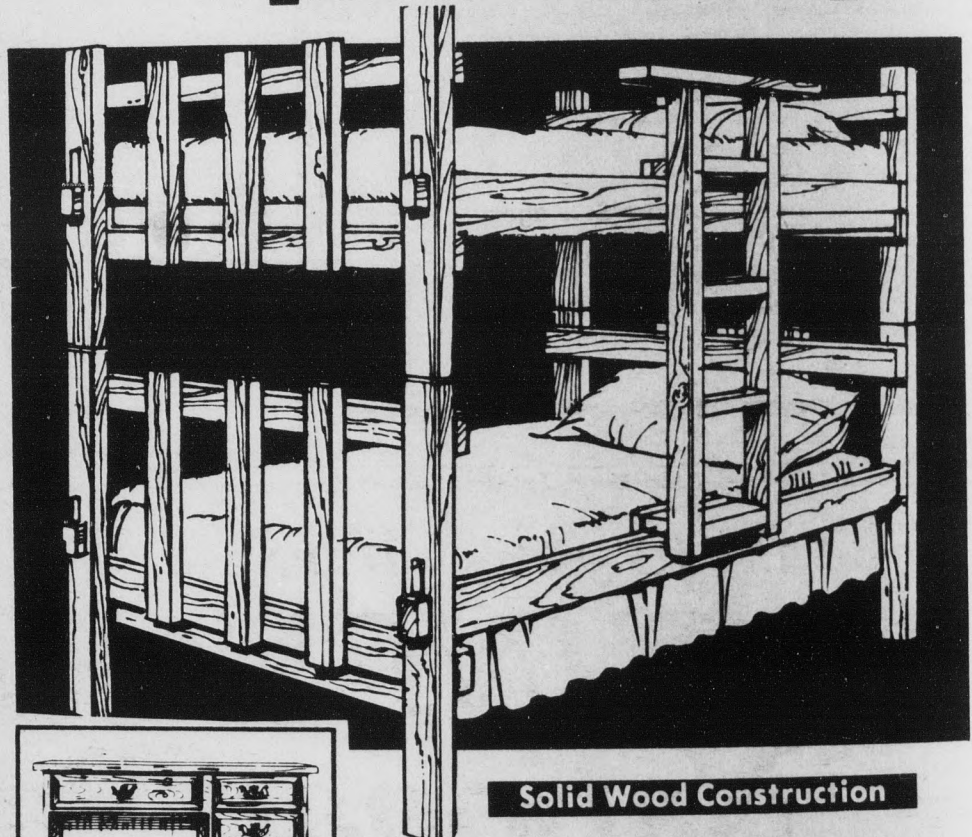

Moore was defeated in 1982 by director Muriel O'Brien, who had served as board observer for the Claremont/Pomona League of Women voters.

Construction of the plants will guarantee enough water for the valley after most of the present supply from the Colorado River is diverted to Arizona this decade, as mandated in 1975 by order of the U.S. Supreme Court.

In this semi-arid valley with its dense population, import water is essential.

Both boards plan to purchase raw imported water for their new treatment

2 agencies equals 2 water plants plants from the same source — the MWD Rialto Reach pipeline at connections 4,000 feet apart.

They will blend the water — using some ground water — and treat it to meet state water quality standards. They then will wholesale that treated water to their agency customers.

Upland Mayor John McCarthy, chairman of the Site Project Committee of the Water Facilities Authority/Joint Powers Agency, said: "We felt we had dealt with this competitively."

"It is true construction of one large plant would save money. That's why we asked them (Three Valleys) to join us. They refused. Our board declined their invitation, too, because of the opposition that exists (on their board) to their plant."

"We don't want to get into an argument with Three Valleys. We have no say on the makeup of the Three Valleys board. We felt that by really becoming involved, we would have no recourse if things did not run smoothly or agreeably. And we have to take into consideration the fact there is a county line dividing us."

"We believe we can build a better plant and better serve our customers. We want to keep the plant in this area where people are supportive of it. We've received no objections to our project."

McCarthy said had Three Valleys accepted the WFA/JPA agency's invitation to join in construction of the Upland plant, "it would have meant greater delays for us. But we would have accepted that."

"In today's economy, delays mean escalating costs," he said. "We took all this into consideration and still extended the invitation."

"We're a good year behind in our initial schedule. But now we feel we have got it off the ground and we're going to go ahead with it. Our plant will meet the needs of the people in the West End of San Bernardino County."

Carlton J. Peterson, a Three Valleys director and a member of the board's engineering committee, said:

"As far as I'm concerned, the Three Valleys board will move ahead with its Miramar project. Providing it is exactly what the upper communities (Claremont, La Verne, San Dimas and Glendora) want."

There is disagreement on this point among members of the Three Valleys board.

"Before we go ahead with the project, we're going to have firm commitments from these various northerly communities to take the water from that treatment plant," Peterson added.

"Draft copies of an agreement are being prepared for their study and acceptance. And upon acceptance by the communities and their agencies, we will go ahead with the final design of the treatment plant."

This agreement will be presented to the Southern California Water Co., which provides the treated water to Claremont and San Dimas, and the cities of La Verne and Glendora.

"I don't see how we can go ahead spending that kind of money until we get concurrence those agencies are willing to pay for the plant," Peterson said.

"I am of the opinion that it would have been economical for the two agencies to have gotten together on the most economically feasible plant to serve all the communities... the Miramar water treatment facility."

What was a waste of money, Peterson said, was for voters of the Three Valleys district to vote down bonds to build the plant in 1975 and again in 1977 "when it might have been built for one-third of the money it presently will cost."

Major campaigns against those bond elections were waged by the Claremont/Pomona League of Women Voters. One of their leaders was O'Brien, now a director on the Three Valleys board.

Imported water is essential in this semi-arid valley, water authorities agree.

There is insufficient rainfall to satisfy the water needs of residential, commercial, agricultural and industrial users.

So the proposed construction of twin water treatment plants in the foothills of Claremont and Upland is accepted philosophically by Chino Mayor Larry Walker.

The bottom line, said Walker, is "home rule, control, power."

"Sometimes I marvel that elected boards accomplish what they do. I see it (this type of dual project) happen all the time. And it certainly does seem there is a much more economical way."

"But look at it this way. This (two plants) is better than having one built in each city. You see cities build the same kinds of municipal facilities."

"I am amazed sometimes by just what does get accomplished, and how."

It's not difficult to see possible savings in building a single, large plant.

Combined costs of the two small plants total more than $114 million.

A single large plant at the Upland site is estimated to cost $96.7 million, while one large plant at the Claremont site is estimated at $80.8 million. All estimates include 20 years' financing costs.

Funds to pay plant costs come from district tax monies, water sales and interest on reserves.

Robert Thompson, executive director of the Monte Vista Water District in Montclair, said his board stands firmly behind the WFA/JPA in its decision on the Benson plant.

"I would not say they are duplicate plants," said Thompson.

"The JPA did discuss with Three Valleys the possibility of a joint project. But it was determined after a two-year study the Benson plant is more efficient and economically feasible."

"The county line is a boundary between the two agencies. Each will build its own."

Jim Lundie, manager of the Pomona Water Department, said he believes that if the two small plants were identical, one larger plant would be more cost effective.

"But I have not been privy to any of the cost analysis or design criteria regarding the filtration plants," Lundie said. "But Pomona is very concerned with regards to water quality, should any of the water be made available to the city of Pomona."

"And should the quality with reference to nitrates be higher than what we are presently receiving from the Weymouth Filtration Plant, MWD's La Verne plant, this would be a major impact upon our water operations."

"We are also concerned on the financing. Those who receive benefits should be those who pay the construction and maintenance and operational costs. Non-participating members of the district should not have to subsidize those who are receiving the benefits."

Pomona is a non-participating member of Three Valleys. Its import water comes from Weymouth through a facility owned and operated by the Pomona-Walnut-Rowland Joint Feeder Line Commission.

The Pomona-Walnut-Rowland Joint Feeder Line is a joint powers authority between those three agencies, formed in 1954 to bring in imported water.

It is administered by a three-member commission. Lundie serves as executive officer. Commissioners are Pomona Mayor G. Stanton Selby, with Albert Fore representing Rowland and Jerry Streater representing Walnut.

Edmund Biederman, general manager of the Walnut Valley Water District — which depends exclusively on imported water — said his district may be able to purchase surplus water from the Miramar plant, if it is built.

"But we're apprehensive about the costs of the surplus water," said Biederman. "We haven't seen anything in dollar amounts."

"Another thing we're apprehensive about is that to date Three Valleys has no bonafide contract with anyone to buy its treated water."

Biederman said that should Three Valleys use its reserve funds for plant construction, it would lose its interest income and thus have to depend more heavily on tax and water sales income.

And, Biederman continued, should voters approve the Jarvis 3 initiative next November, special districts may lose their tax income, which accounts for roughly one-fourth of Three Valleys' budget.

Mark Klett's photos of the Southwest go on view today

An exhibition of 20 black-and-white photographs of the Southwest by Mark Klett will be on view today through May 27, in the Ahmanson Gallery at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. The exhibition, entitled "Mark Klett: Searching for Artifacts — Photographs of the Southwest," shows the artist's interest in the relationship between modern man and the land.

The photographs are influenced by Klett's experience in the late 1970s as the chief photographer for the Reprographic Survey Project, which was funded by the National Endowment for the Arts. Traveling throughout the West, Klett photographed sites that were first documented in the 1870s by photographers working on surveys of the western territories.

The photographs illustrate the encroachment of civilization into undeveloped places of magnificent spaciousness and grandeur. Klett insinuates some evidence of man's existence into virtually all of his photographs. His views of the Sedona subdivision reflect this concern.

A second notable aspect in Klett's photographs is scale, which he uses to try to underscore the relationship between the solitary image of man and the vastness of space. "Plywood Tee-Pees, Meteor Crater, Arz.," a simple and haunting image on view in the exhibition, exemplifies this disparity.

The notion of time, a third concern, has been very skillfully incorporated by Klett into these photographs. People engaged in transitory and mundane activities, such as swimming, fishing, or lunching, are juxtaposed with a terrain formed, so obviously, over many thousands of years.

"Mark Klett: Searching for Artifacts — Photographs of the Southwest" has been organized by Kathleen McCarthy Gauss, assistant curator of the Department of Photography at the Museum. This exhibition is part of the Museum's ongoing series, "New American Photography."

Clockwise from right, the new Miss Rancho Cucamonga Jacqueline Pantoja receives congratulations from the Miller's Outpost cowboys. During the competition, the swimsuit clad contestants lined up in front of the judges six at a time. One at a time, they paraded by in their evening gowns. First runner-up Rosalie Ricci answered a few questions for Steve Nash, master of ceremonies. The former Miss Foothill Fire District Adrienne Hall took the honor of second runner-up.

... she comes ...

With the Miller Outpost cowboys, J.R. and Homer, kneeling at her feet, the new Miss Rancho Cucamonga waved to her constituents as she began her year-long reign.

Seventeen-year-old Jacqueline Pantoja was selected from 17 other local lovelies at the apex of the Miss Rancho Cucamonga pageant Saturday night.

Teary-eyed and almost speechless, Jacqueline graciously accepted congratulations and patiently posed for photographers with her court: first runner-up and Miss Foothill Fire District Rosalie Ricci and Adrienne Hall, second runner-up.

Participants were judged for beauty, poise and personality in both evening gown and swimsuit competition. Contestants were awarded points in a personal interview before the final pageant judging.

Jacqueline had been named Most Photogenic and, along with the 17 other contestants, waited for the name of the new Miss Rancho Cucamonga to be announced.

"When he said number 15 was who had won, I wondered who was number 15; it almost hurt when he said my name and I started crying," she said.

Jacqueline said she never expected to win the Miss Rancho Cucamonga title. "I wasn't really confident. I've never been in a pageant and I didn't answer the question (asked during the evening gown judging) and all the girls were beautiful."

She said being named Miss Rancho Cucamonga would open doors to "some things that I always wanted to do but never thought I could do before." Among those things is representing the city to the best of her ability.

According to Jacqueline, her family and friends were supportive, helping her prepare for the personal interview segment of the competition.

"I would practice for the interview with my family, and my best friend Tammie Di Carlo (also a contestant) and I worked together (on interview questions)."

Jacqueline said her sister Evelyn's beauty pageant experience influenced her decision to vie for the city's title. "She thought it was fun when she was in pageants."

Evelyn said she knew her sister could win but Jacqueline's mother, Amelia said she was surprised. "It (being in the pageant) was something she wanted to do. We (she and her husband Gilbert) always (encourage) her in whatever she wants," her mother said.

The new Miss Rancho Cucamonga describes herself as being sensitive. "I used to be really shy but after I was mascot (at Alta Loma High School) I started to open up ... I like making people happy," she said.

Meeting new people, attending chamber mixers, meeting people and being a representative for the city of Rancho Cucamonga are among some of the responsibilities Jacqueline sees in her new role.

"Donna Allen was really good, no excellent ... I hope to do a great job like Donna did, I hope to do my best," she said.

Allen, in her final remarks as the reigning Miss Rancho Cucamonga, told more than 450 people attending the pageant that all the contestants were winners.

"Every woman who enters a pageant is a winner and a queen if she goes through with it. It's hard. All the contestants go through the same thing ... they help one another and share together and that is the real victory," Allen said.

The former Miss Rancho Cucamonga said every time she put on the crown all the memories of winning came back. "Hold on to those feelings ... don't let the glitter (go), give everything you've got because it (your reign) goes by quickly and you have to give it (the crown) back. It's (serving as Miss Rancho Cucamonga) is a priceless, golden opportunity," Allen said.

Other award winners were Angie Hitchcock, who was chosen by the contestants as Miss Congeniality. Receiving a $500 modeling scholarship was Taryn Cherise MacRae.

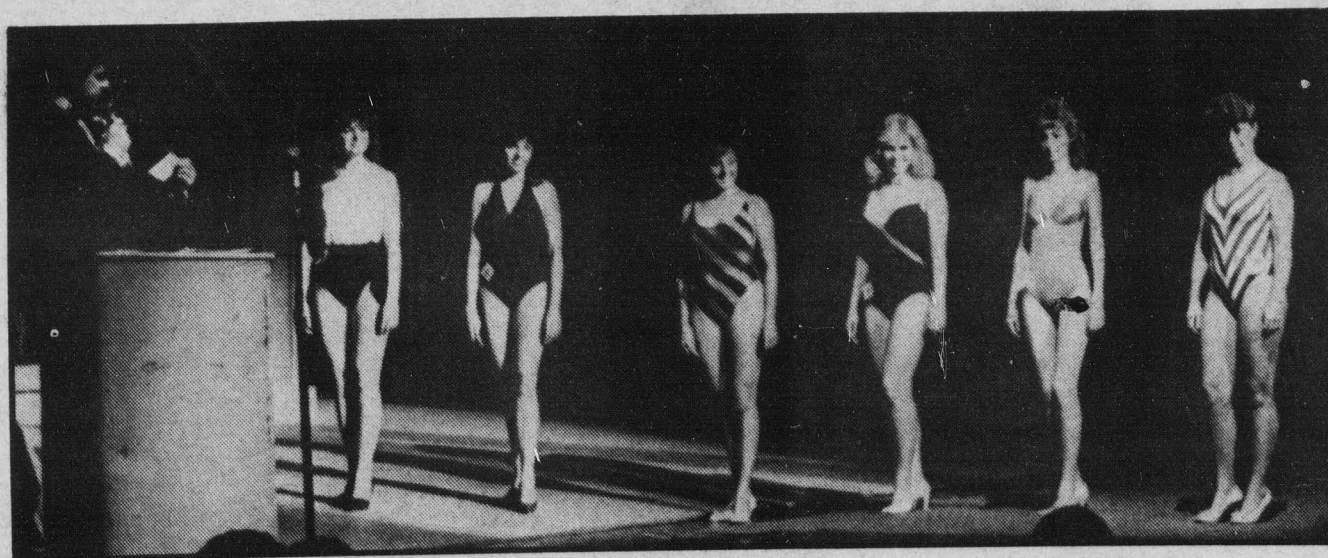

Jacqueline said she plans to go to a two-year college after graduation to complete general education requirements, then go to a university to study child psychology.

Entertaining the audience was Ron Stein, an Elvis Presley impressionist, and some of the Los Angeles Rams cheerleaders. Steve Nash was master of ceremonies.

Winners received $300, $200 and $100, respectively, along with their tiaras and trophies.

Along with the Miss Rancho Cucamonga title, Jacqueline received a $300 gift certificate from the Miller's Outpost Cowboys, good at — where else — Miller's Outpost.

"I'm still in shock and really excited," the new Miss Rancho Cucamonga said in a later telephone interview. "I can't find the words to say how I feel, so I'll just smile and be happy."

Sorry about last week...no column! I seems I did a number on my right wrist and that left me virtually helpless. Without friends and an efficient husband I would have been lost.

This is another week and the wrist is better, so back to the business at hand.

If you enjoy Japanese food and have experienced the flavor and atmosphere of Kishi Japanese Restaurant in Upland on Foothill Blvd. you'll be happy to hear that Ray Kishi has opened another restaurant. This one is sorta like Japanese smorgasbord, the brand new Kishi Japanese Buffet opened just a while back in the Mountaingreen Center in Upland.

The first restaurant is a table service and now we have a choice of either that or the new buffet serve-yourself and all-you-can-eat.

Lunch at the new Kishi Japanese Buffet is served from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. for only $4.50 and dinner from 4 to 10 p.m. is only $7.95.

At the new restaurant you'll have a choice of 30 different entrees daily including shrimp tempura, sushi and a salad bar. Sounds like a great place for either lunch or dinner when you're looking for something new and exciting.

You'll find Kishi Japanese Buffet Restaurant nestled between Longs and Mervyn's at 289 S. Mountain Ave.

If lunch or dinner should find you in Upland you have another choice that would certainly be worth considering.

In the Upland Northwest Center La La's Mexican Restaurant opened just a couple weeks ago taking over the space left vacant by Puff 'n Porridge at 1667 N. Mountain.

Frank and Hilaria (La La) Grau have decided to return to the restaurant business. You might recognize them from a few years back when they operated Casa del Valenciano.

You'll enjoy all your Mexican favorites plus many selections that would be an adventure to try just for the taste of it.

If you love quiche then you must visit Dessert Cottage at 8300 Foothill Blvd. in Rancho Cucamonga and try their "UnBEARably Good" quiche. You can order it by the pie or by the slice. Some of your choices are chicken and broccoli, spinach and mushroom, tomato with green chilies, crabmeat with green onion and the ever popular quiche Lorraine.

Until next week...Bon Appetit!!

Children's theater group is starting classes locally

Sunshine Generation, a children's musical theater performance group, is starting classes in this area.

The group enables girls and boys ages 3-12 to learn singing skills, music theory and musical theater dance with the option to perform these skills for their community on a monthly basis.

Sunshine Generation also allows children to build self-confidence and develop showmanship and leadership skills without the pressure and competition of auditions.

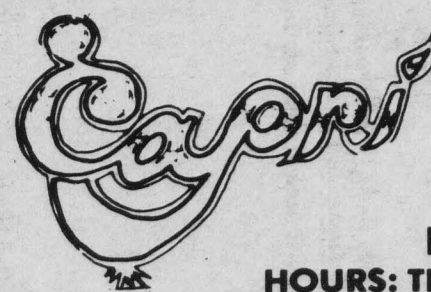

Vicki Slater is the director of the group. She is an elementary school teacher with several years background in dance, piano, music theory and children's drama.

Classes are held in the Upland area on a weekly basis at the cost of $20 per month. The children are divided into three groups, the Singing Sunbeams, ages 3-5; the Sundance Kids, ages 7-9; and the Solar Sounds, ages 10-12.

Performances are given throughout the community at no charge. For information regarding performance scheduling or registration for classes, contact Vicki Slater at 981-4043.

The light comedy "Once Upon a Mattress" openstonight at Alta Loma High School. Rehearsing scenes from the play are Arthur Ayala (seated in throne), Leslie Eagle (sitting next to him), Derek Gullino (seated on floor) and Barbara Canton (standing).

Musical opening tonight

By Matt Coker

A princess named Fred? A silent king? A loud-mouthed queen? What could it all mean?

Alta Loma High School's newest stage production, that's what.

The school's theater group is presenting the light-hearted musical comedy production "Once Upon a Mattress," the comic update of the fairy tale "The Princess and the Pea."

Performances are slated for tonight, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the school auditorium.

Proceeds from tickets, which are $4 ($3.50 for those with student body cards), will fund student theatrical productions in the future.

Queen Aggravain, played by Leslie Eagle, is the domineering, imperious mother of Prince Dauntless, played by Derek Gullino. Barbara Canton plays Princess Winnifred, alias "Fred."

The romantic leads, Lady Larken and Sir Harry, are played by Misti Merrill and Mike Blount. Arthur Ayala plays the silent King Sextimus, and his comedic counterparts, the Minstrel and the Jester, are played by John Mancini and Matt Kubicek.

Heather Pritchard makes a bid to gain control of ball for Braves.

By Ron Witt

Many observers of high school soccer may be surprised to see Alta Loma High School's girls in the CIF 4A Division finals Saturday night.

After all, the Braves were no better than third in the Baseline League the past regular season and had to win a wild card game over Huntington Beach just to get into the regular 16-team field of the playoffs.

But on the heels of that tournament-opening, 2-0 victory over the Oilers, Alta Loma has followed up with equally inspiring triumphs over third-seeded Bishop Montgomery of Torrance (3-2), South Torrance (penalty kicks after a 2-2 tie) and Baseline champion Claremont (1-0).

Quite suddenly, the Braves are in position to capture the title if they can beat top-seeded Torrance in the championship game at 6 p.m. at Gahr High School in Cerritos.

An Alta Loma title might come as a surprise to some, but it wouldn't be one to Braves' coach Luigi Traverso, who believes in his team's ability to rise to the occasion.

"I knew we had a lot of potential," declares Traverso, who coached boys' teams at Chaffey and Alta Loma highs before switching to the Braves' girls' program two years ago.

"This is a scrappy team," he praises. "The girls all come through at the right moment. Maybe they weren't so hot in league on occasion, but when they play for all the marbles, they're good. They're aggressive and go for the ball."

Traverso, whose team is 19-3-3, says coaching the 1984 edition of the Braves has been "a lot of fun," especially because the team has accomplished so much in the playoffs.

"They're a lot of moments you worry about," says Traverso. "In CIF, you don't know what kind of team you're going to play, and you never know how you're going to do until you start playing."

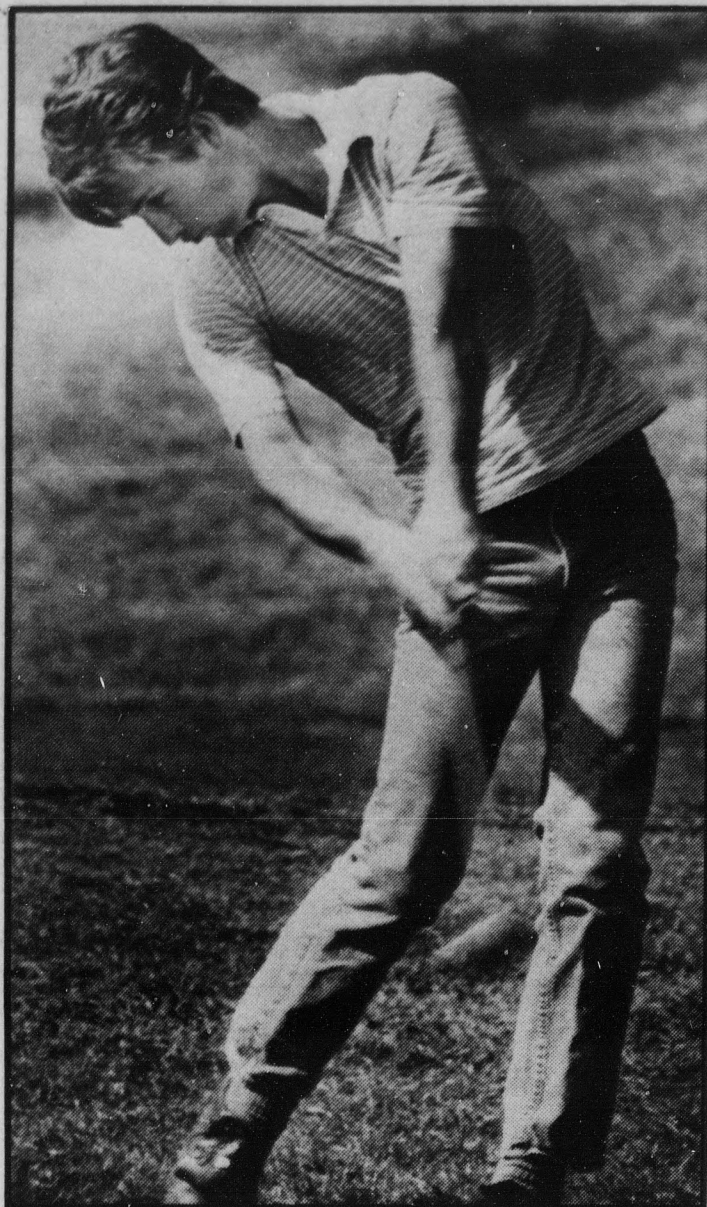

Apparently, Traverso hasn't found coaching girls' soccer teams any more challenging than coaching the boys.

"For me, soccer is soccer," he says. "It doesn't make any difference."

Alta Loma has lost only to Upland twice and Claremont during the season. There were two ties with Claremont and one with St. Lucy's.

Leading scorers for the Braves have been senior halfback Heather Pritchard, junior forward Larissa Funtas and sophomore sweeper

John Iriart fired a 79 Monday over the Mission Lakes course to aid Chaffey College to its first tournament victory.

Panthers in golf surprise

Members of the Chaffey College golf team should be easy to spot Friday afternoon at Upland Hills Country Club — they'll be the ones with the extra bounce in the walk.

Coach Mary Williams' Panthers captured the first golf tournament in some time for the school Monday by topping a field of 10 community colleges at the Mission Lakes Country Club's Desert Classic in Palm Springs.

"I'm very excited for the kids," said Williams, in her second year as golf coach for Chaffey. "They adapted to the windy conditions, played smart and were successful."

Chaffey finished the day's play with a 405 score, three better than Santa Ana and four ahead of Orange Coast. The Panthers are scheduled to entertain Santa Ana Friday at UHCC in a non-league match.

Dave Hill paced the Chaffey effort with a 76, second best on the day behind Andy Weaver of Orange Coast. Rupert Vahey and John Iriart each added a 79 to the Chaffey total while Gary Patterson and Andy Grant contributed a 83 and 88, respectively.

"It was a very windy day, and our group made the adjustments," said Williams. "They key to our win was getting five to post good scores under the conditions."

According to Williams, Chaffey didn't wrap up its victory until Patterson walked off the 6,723-yard course. The returning player from Fontana allowed the Panthers to pull the stunning upset.

Earlier this year, Chaffey was 17 shots off the pace set by Citrus at the initial Inland Valley Conference match at Mission Hills, also in Palm Springs.

"This year's squad is very much team-oriented, so it was good for them to win," said Williams. "They're a nice group, I couldn't have asked for a better group."

Beth Hendricks.

Lori Vickery, a tall junior with good range, has kept opponents at bay in goal.

Other regulars in the Braves' lineup have been senior Shelly Wade, juniors Shannon Suiter, Sharon Strnad, Lisa Grossi, Ronni Nelson and sophomores Jennifer Funtas, Stephanie Montatto and Beverly Gaines.

Senior Carlene Sawtelle, sophs Allison Pritchard and Teresa

Koontz and freshmen Suzy Thomas and Lori Smith have provided vital depth for the Braves.

Another freshman, Miriam Santos, was a starting fullback for the Braves earlier in the year but is sidelined with a twisted knee.

Assisting Traverso in coaching has been Sylvester Martinez, a former Alta Loma High student now attending Chaffey College. "He's a good boy and knows soccer very well," praises Traverso.

But the elder Milliken had plans for the arid land: He had seen dry grape farming in the Sonoma and Napa Valley, and decided to try the same, waterless system in the Inland Empire.

"We think we were the first to do dry ranch grape farming, but we're not sure," noted Milliken.

The farmer and his partner divided their property and Milliken sold a piece of the land for money to plant with, his grandson explained.

"He planted within two years. To do dry ranch grape farming, you take a 15-inch cutting, put it in the ground about two inches and hope to get enough rain to grow grapes. That's all there is to it; it's simple," Milliken said.

"Mother didn't like the idea of raising grapes for wine, so we had seedless sultanas we had to trellis and tie to posts. We would pick and place the grapes on cheese-cloth between the rows to dry for two weeks — if it didn't rain, that is," Milliken said.

"The grapes were then put in 50 pound boxes to a sweat house (where) the over-dried groups would absorb from the under-dried," he said. The raisins were then stemmed, washed, packed in 25 pound boxes and shipped to a raisin buyer.

Milliken recounted one year when his family had a bumper crop. "It was our best year, we had a bumper crop of about 200 tons; but we lost it all during the rains, including $1,000 we had in savings."

The Know Your Heritage lecture series will begin again in the fall, according to Maxine Strane, chairman of the Historic Preservation Commission.

30,000 varieties of orchids

Orchids, which grow almost everywhere except the arctic, antarctic and the desert, represent the largest family of flowering plants with over 30,000 different varieties in every color of the rainbow. Four of those varieties were featured on a 20-cent block of four U.S. stamps issued during the 11th World Orchid Conference, March 5, in Miami, Fla.

Although considered to be an important addition to floral arrangements and corsages by florists because of their rich color and striking beauty, orchids also are used for less aesthetic purposes. In some countries, vanilla is extracted from one species, the leaves of another are sold as a vegetable, and one variety is roasted and eaten like a potato.

This block of four, designed by Manabu Saito, depicts a quartet of native American orchids. Appearing in the lower right corner of each stamp is "USA 20c." Below each design in a single line of black type are the common and scientific names for the orchid depicted.

The stamp in the upper left corner of the block features the wild pink orchid (Arethusa bulbosa), which is indigenous to Florida; the yellow lady's slipper (Cypripedium calceolus), found in the Midwest, is depicted in the upper right; the spreading pongonia (Cleistes divaricata), a native of the Northeast, is shown in the lower left, and the Pacific calypso (Calypso bulbosa), found along the Pacific coast, is the subject of the lower right stamp.

The stamps were printed on the gravure press in panes of 48 in the colors yellow, magenta, cyan, black and green. There are five plate numbers in a single group on each pane.

Procedures for first-day cancellation orders are:

Customers purchasing the stamps at local post offices and affixing to addressed envelopes should send their orders to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Postmaster, Miami, FL 33152-9991. No remittance required.

Those desiring the postal service to affix the stamps, should send addressed covers to: Orchids Stamps, Postmaster, Miami, FL 33152-9992, along with 20 cents for each stamp to be affixed. (Send checks, no cash).

Postmark all orders no later than April 4.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA — On Feb. 8 Papua New Guinea issued six postage stamps depicting marine turtles found in that country. There are only seven species of marine turtles alive in the world today and all of them are experiencing serious survival problems.

Turtles have been hunted for centuries in Papua New Guinea, supplying some of the basic needs of the village society for food, tools, decorations and items of trade. Today conservationists are having to work toward the management and controlled exploitation of the marine turtles, instead of adopting the total protection used in countries like Australia.

Shown on the six stamps are the Flatback Turtle (5-toea), the Green Turtle (10t), the Hawksbill Turtle (15t), the Olive, or Pacific Ridley (20t), the Loggerhead Turtle (25t) and the Leatherback Turtle (40t).

SRI LANKA — The Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications of Sri Lanka (formerly, Ceylon) issued four stamps Jan. 31 noting that country's centennial year of the Colombo Tea Auction.

The first tea plant to be grown in that area was planted at the Royal Botanic Gardens in Peradeniya in 1839. The first commercial planting of tea in Ceylon took place in 1867 on the Looecondra Estate in Deltota.

Ceylon was trying to recover from the devastation of the coffee rust fungus on its coffee industry, so more and more tea was planted. By July 26, 1883, the first tea auction was held in Colombo. Tea was Ceylon's first foreign exchange earner and has continued to be for almost a century. Today the Colombo Tea Auction is the world's largest.

Scenes of the Tea Auction building, logos, tea picking and an auction are shown on stamps of 1, 2, 5 and 10 rupees.

Cyprus adopts new cent system

Two decades after the issue of its first national coinage, the Mediterranean republic of Cyprus has adopted the new cent system.

Replacing the previous 100, 50, 25, 5 and 1 mil coins are six new coins. The art and history of Cyprus is clearly evident in each of the new designs. The emblem of Cyprus is the common obverse on all coins, but the reverses are uniquely different.

On the reverse of the 20-cent piece is a pied wheatear perched on an olive branch of the holy tree. The pied wheatear is the characteristic bird of Cyprus, while the branch is internationally recognized as a symbol of peace. The 10-cent coin bears the design of a modern clay vase of Phini, decorated with flowers and chirping birds.

Appearing on the 5-cent coin is a 14th century silver bowl with a wishbone handle — a famous museum exhibit.

The 2-cent piece displays a pair of goats and dates to the 13th century B.C. A stylized bird is on the 1-cent coin — another design derived from an ancient jug. On the half-cent coin is the cyclamen flower which grows in the mountains of Cyprus.

A limited edition of 10,000 proof sets will be struck worldwide for collectors. The half cent is of aluminum while the others are of nickel-brass alloy. Struck by the Royal Mint of England, the coins are offered in an acrylic frame which is held in a folding presentation case.

China has released four coins and a pattern bearing the likeness of Venetian explorer Marco Polo. It was Polo who crossed Asia by land and visited Cathay (medieval China) in 1271-1295 period and is generally credited with spurring European interest in the Far East.

The coins are comprised of two gold in the denominations of 10 and 100 yuan.

The 10 yuan is 10 millimeters in diameter and weighs 1.2 grams while the 100 yuan is 23mm wide and weighs 11 grams.

The silver coins are the 5 yuan, which is 36mm in diameter with a weight of 22 grams. The other is a 5 jian coin 15mm in diameter and weighing 2.2 grams.

All obverses show Yu's Pass, west terminal of the Great Wall of China. The reverses feature Marco Polo Epopea and face values.

The coins are all proof condition and struck in .900 fine silver and gold. They are dated 1983 and are in an official presentation case. There is also a certificate of authenticity.

Additional information on both the Cyprus coins and the Chinese coins may be obtained from the World Proof Numismatic Association, P.O. Box 4094, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15201.

Nothing like getting ahead of yourself.

With the 1984 Olympics just now drawing attention, the host nation of the 1988 Games, South Korea, has already issued a set of three coins to honor the event four years hence in Seoul.

They are a 20,000 won denomination, a 10,000 won coin and a 1,000 won piece. The first two are silver while the latter is of cupronickel.

Disagreement over true shamrock

The legends of St. Patrick's Day are widespread and firm, but there's considerable disagreement even among the Irish when it comes to the shamrock plant.

Historically, St. Patrick chose the shamrock as a symbol of the Trinity. The plant has become a symbol for good luck and as St. Patrick's Day approaches, shamrocks are given as gifts, and the distinctive clover-shaped leaves are worn to recognize the day.

But which plant is the authentic shamrock? That's where disagreement begins, even among horticulture folk. The clover-shape leaf is common to trifolium and exilis plant families, both of which grow in Ireland.

To add to the confusion, three different plants are often tagged as true Irish shamrocks: yellow flower clover (Trifolium dubium); little white clover (Trifolium repens minus); and wood sorrel (Oxalis acetosella).

"Whichever one you select, growing conditions are similar for all of them," says David Baggett, Mon. Jomery, Ala., staff horticulturist for Tupperware. "They grow well in a cool and humid environment and all enjoy a lot of sunlight."

If your shamrock is a clover (Trifolium), it is grown from seed. The wood sorrel (Oxalis) is grown from small bulbs of the mature plant. Wood sorrel makes a better house plant than clover, which may become lanky if grown in the home environment.

Keep the plant in a bright, sunny window for good results. During dark days and at night, the leaflets will often fold along the center vein.

Irish shamrocks are available at nurseries, garden shops and florists, often in self-watering, constant feed, plastic growing systems.
